ENTRANCE

"Once the residence of Simon Bolivar, this 16th-century manor house in the historic district is now a National Geographic Unique Lodge of the World with Peruvian-influenced cuisine and a luxe spa using local botanics."

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC

Contemporary luxury meets the charm of a Peruvian home, capturing the sense of privacy and privilege experienced by Conquistador Diego de Almagro, Libertador Simón Bolívar and other illustrious guests, as external doors are always closed.

Even without the backstory, Inkaterra La Casona, built within a 16th-century manor house anchored by a grassy courtyard, is a compelling spot to stay. It has a mere 11 suites, each with a wood fireplace and a pedestal tub big enough to swim in. The vibe is Peruvian through and through, with pre-Columbian-style weavings and Spanish colonial furnishings. Everywhere you look there's some new detail to catch, be it the intricate carving on a wooden door or the frescoes bordering the ceiling. But the history puts this hotel on a whole other level: it was built on the foundations of a training ground for the Incan army, and at one point it was the home of the legendary Simón Bolívar.

ALTITUDE INDEX

Self-financed via ecotourism, NGO Inkaterra Asociación (ITA) performs scientific research since 1978 to define natural areas where Inkaterra hotels are established.

Inventories on flora and fauna set a benchmark to compare the brand's future impact. A total of 814 bird species, 365 ant species (world record sponsored by Harvard Professor E.O. Wilson), 313 butterfly species, 100 mammal species and 1266 vascular plant species have been registered within hotel grounds and surroundings, as 28 species new to science have been described: 20 orchids, 5 amphibians, 1 butterfly, 2 bromeliads and 1 tropical vine.
