Peru, this South American country is often on the travel bucket list. How could it not? It's home to some of the most stunning landscapes. The country is lined with towering peaks of the Andes, gorgeous beaches, and the infamously dense Amazon rainforest, which takes up most of its landscapes.

Peru is also home to a rich cultural diversity and has an even richer history; the Incan ruins of Machu Picchu and pre-Incan sites like Nazca Lines make it an intensely exciting place to visit.

If you are heading to Peru and want to choose an eco-friendly accommodation, then browse through these eco-lodges (https://www.stay22.com/allez/wildcard?

If you want a lodging that is not only simple, elegant, and comfortable but also eco-friendly, take a look at these sustainable lodges:

What are eco-lodges?

Eco-lodges (<https://ecolodgesanywhere.com/eco-lodges-definition/>) are accommodations in undisturbed, remote natural areas where both construction and operation have the lowest impact possible on the environment. They are not only part of the local community, but they are active participants in protecting nature and culturally sensitive areas.

Treehouse Lodge (<https://treehouselodge.com/>) lies in the dense trees in Iquitos. The Treehouse Lodge offers 12 treehouses, all designed a little differently but hanging 35-75 feet above the ground. Naturally, all treehouses provide a stunning overview of the forest, making even a simple night's sleep feel like you're conversing with Mother Nature.
